Three Taxes That Influence Behavior

Module 7—Standard Deduction

The standard deduction reduces the income that is subject to tax. The amount of the standard deduction depends on the filing status, the age of the taxpayer and spouse, whether the taxpayer or spouse is blind, and whether the taxpayer can be claimed as a dependent on another taxpayer's return.

On the basis of filing status, the standard deduction for 2002 was

Standard Deduction for 2002
Single	$4,700
Head of household	$6,900
Married filing a joint return	$7,850
Qualifying widow(er) with dependent child	$7,850
Married filing a separate return	$3,925

The standard deduction is increased for taxpayers and spouses who are age 65 or older or who are blind.

The standard deduction may be reduced for taxpayers who can be claimed as dependents on another taxpayer's return.

For 2001, the standard deduction for a taxpayer who can be claimed as a dependent on another taxpayer's return was

- earned income (wages, salaries, tips, etc.) plus $250

- but not less than $750

- and not more than the standard deduction for the single filing status
